ACTOR SAYS NO APOLOGY NEEDED FOR 'HAMILTON'; REMARKS TO PENCE

L An actor from the hit Broadway musical "Hamilton" who angered Donald Trump when he appealed on-stage for Vice President-elect Mike Pence to ensure the incoming administration respected all Americans said on Monday he would not apologize for the remarks. President-elect Trump has complained several times about the comments delivered on behalf of the cast by actor Brandon Victor Dixon when Pence attended the show on Friday evening. In a series of weekend Twitter messages, Trump accused the cast of "terrible behavior," said they had "harassed" Pence and demanded that they apologize. Pence himself said on Sunday he was not offended, and declined to ask for an apology. REUTERS

TECH WORKER VISAS FACE UNCERTAIN FUTURE UNDER TRUMP, SESSIONS

2 The main U.S. visa program for technology workers could face renewed scrutiny under Donald Trump and his proposed Attorney General, Sen. Jeff Sessions, a long-time critic of the skilled-worker program. H-1B visas admit 65,000 workers and another 20,000 graduate student workers each year. The tech industry, which has lobbied to expand the program, may now have to fight a rear-guard action to protect it, immigration attorneys and lobbyists said. Trump sent mixed signals on the campaign trail, sometimes criticizing the visas but other times calling them an important way to retain foreign talent. Sessions, however, has long sought to curtail the program and introduced legislation last year aiming to make the visas less available to large outsourcing companies such as Infosys. REUTERS

WAL-MART WILL OFFER CYBER MONDAY DEALS STARTING BLACK FRIDAY

3 Wal-Mart Stores Inc. will start offering online deals reserved for Cyber Monday two days in advance this year, joining a growing list of U.S. retailers who offer web promotions over the Thanksgiving weekend. Wal-Mart's special web promotions will be available on Black Friday, the retailer said in a statement late on Sunday. Cyber Monday is the biggest day of the year for internet shopping and follows Black Friday, which is the busiest shopping day for brick-and-mortar retailers. Wal-Mart recently said it will boost its online inventory for Black Friday by more than half this year, as it pulls out all stops to grow online sales this holiday season. The retailer has grown its online inventory to 23 million items from 8 million at the start of the year. REUTERS

Local startup to test self-driving cars on city streets

The city announced a partnership with nuTonomy to test out the autonomous vehicles on our complicated roadways and in our inclement weather.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

The future is now in Boston — at least when it comes to self-driving cars.

The city announced Monday its partnership with nuTonomy, a Cambridge-based company, to begin testing self-driving cars on certain streets by the end of 2016. The company was founded by two robotics experts out of MIT.

The autonomous vehicles will collect data by driving around the Raymond L. Flynn Marine Park in the Seaport district. The park, which was formerly known as the Boston Marine Industrial Park, extends 191 acres along the South Boston Waterfront.

"It's an area that is a little bit less congested and trafficked than other parts of the city, but while still having a road network that is useful to the people testing this technology," said Kris Carter, co-chair of the Mayor's Office of New Urban Mechanics. "A car that operates there has to contend with other vehicles, buses, pedestrians, cyclists and deal with those challenges."

Carter noted that restricting the test to that area means that these cars won't have to handle more complex situations like six-way intersections within the city. Boston's unique, non-grid layout, along with its challenging weather, were both interesting challenges that the researchers wanted to tackle.

Testing will begin in the next few days and a nuTonomy engineer will ride in the vehicle to observe the system and take over control if that's necessary, said a company representative.

The company is focusing on one vehicle model for these tests: a Renault Zoe electric car that has been equipped with nuTonomy's self-driving software, which grew out of research conducted in MIT labs run by the co-founders,

Karl Iagnemma

Karl Iagnemma and Emilio Frazzoli.

"Boston and Massachusetts are leaders in rethinking the future of transportation, and we are grateful for their partnership and support of nuTonomy's efforts to develop a fleet of self-driving cars to serve the public," Iagnemma said in a news release.

The city will be able to monitor the effects of these autonomous vehicles to understand the ways in which they can help with safety, access and sustainability, which were the three core goals that came out of the Go Boston 2030 transportation plan. Carter said.

"We heard resoundingly from residents that they want the roads to be safer, and if you look at the promise of automated vehicles, there's upwards of removing 90 percent of crashes from our roadways," he said. "Obviously we're not there yet, but we felt that we needed to be at the table and actively helping the research agenda meet those goals."

Lisa D'Ambrosio, a research assistant at MIT's AgeLab (separate from the MIT labs involved with nuTonomy) said her team has been focusing on how autonomous vehicle technology could help the city's older population with mobility while allowing them to remain in their homes.

'Table of Friends' celebrates 21 years of bringing Thanksgiving dinner to Boston homeless

Boston's political leaders and athletic champions joined forces Monday to once again bring a Thanksgiving feast to Boston's homeless Monday.

For the past 21 years, the "Table of Friends" has provided a hot meal and forum for some of Boston's most at-risk residents to break bread with city leaders.

Mayor Marty Walsh and Police Commissioner Bill Evans were among those who helped serve up more than 1,200 pounds of turkey, 1,000 pounds of stuffing, 40 gallons of gravy, 850 pounds of mashed potatoes, 500 pounds of carrots, 100 pounds of green beans, 115 dozen rolls and 10 gallons of cranberry sauce.

The food was donated by Delaware North's Sportservice,

Scott Brown being considered for secretary of veterans affairs

Former Massachusetts Sen. Scott Brown said he is being considered to lead the federal Department of Veterans Affairs after meeting with the president-elect Monday at Trump Tower.

Brown, a Republican, supported President-elect Donald Trump during the campaign, and had served for many years in the Army National Guard. If selected to head the department, his priorities would include addressing veteran suicides and outsourcing some VA services to private providers, he told boston.com.

Brown, now a New Hampshire resident, served in the Massachusetts House of Representatives and in the state Senate from 1998 to 2010, when he succeeded Sen. Ted Kennedy in a special election following Kennedy's death.

Former Massachusetts Sen. Scott Brown is reportedly in the running to be the next secretary of veterans affairs. MICHAEL UGDON/TUCKER

When he ran for a full six-year term in 2012, he lost to Elizabeth Warren, a Democrat.

Brown has more than 30 years experience in the National Guard, and he spent his two-week 2010 summer duty in Afghanistan during the August congressional recess, the Boston Globe reported.

Detox Your Body - Every Day

If you are feeling exhausted and in need of revitalization, you should consider a detox or cleanse. With Active Liver™ you have the tool to do this gently and on a daily basis.

Each day, our liver is working hard to remove waste products and toxins from processed foods, unclean air, water and even our own body. But as we get exposed to increasingly more toxins, the liver struggles to remove them all and can start storing them in our body fat. We quickly may notice the results in our energy levels, in our lack of youthful appearance – and surprisingly – on our waistlines.

UNJUNKING YOUR BODY

A detox, like a water or juice fast, is an excellent way to rid the body of stored toxins, but it is often difficult to abide by, and can involve days or even weeks of feeling tired and sick. However, there are other ways.

DETOX WITH ONE TABLET A DAY

Active Liver is a natural health product that helps promote your liver's health and helps you detox on a daily basis – all year round. With just one tablet a day, it gently but effectively uses known herbal extracts to facilitate detoxing of the body –without the "side effects".

Active Liver™ contains milk thistle, a herb known for protecting the liver. It also contains turmeric, a "superfood" and known anti-inflammatory spice. Finally, Active Liver contains globe artichoke, a plant used for centuries for increasing bile production. Bile is helpful in binding and flushing toxins and fats from the body.

THE LIVER AND YOUR WAISTLINE

The liver is an important fat burning organ. Experts claim that if the liver is sluggish or clogged with waste material it will be less able to work, and fat can start to build up, under the skin, as belly fat and even inside the internal organs. Making sure your liver is working well, they say, will help you flush fats from the body.

Rally against hate crimes draws crowd at State House in Boston

"We will move civil rights forward, not backward," Mayor Marty Walsh said.

@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

They showed up to stand up against hate.

More than 100 people gathered outside the Massachusetts State House in Boston Monday to make their voices heard against hate, responding to scores of bias-motivated incidents reported recently across the commonwealth and the country.

"We come together today as a community, irrespective of who we voted for," Robert Trestan, the regional director for the New England Anti-Defamation League, told the crowd. "We are here to speak out against the more than 700 reported incidents across the country."

Hundreds of hate incidents nationwide have occurred following the presidential election of Donald Trump, and among those are numerous swastikas scrawled and painted on walls and in the streets.

In Massachusetts, bias incidents have been reported in such cities as Boston, Cambridge, Natick and Wellesley. State Attorney General Maura Healey, who last week launched a hotline to allow residents to report harassment and hate crimes, said at the rally that her office has already received more than 400 calls.

"Here's what's non-negotiable: Everyone in this country deserves dignity, everyone in this country deserves respect," she said.

"Racism is a deal-breaker; sexism is a deal-breaker; Islamophobia is a deal-breaker," Healey added, her voice drowned out by the cheering crowd.

In the crowd were people holding handmade signs, some reading, "We won't wait to denounce hate" and "Immigrants make America great."

Kate Koch-Sundquist of Essex brought her two boys, 5-year-old Sebastian and 3-year-old August.

"I believe that planting the roots of peace starts with this generation," Koch-Sundquist said, gesturing to her kids.

Sebastian held a sign that read, "Make America kind again," and August held one that said, "No hate in my state."

More than 50 groups were represented within the crowd, including the New England Anti-Defamation League, LGBTQ Legal Advocates and Defenders, Jewish Community Center of Greater Boston and the Boston Branch of the NAACP.

Kanye West cancels remainder of Saint Pablo Tour

Kanye West left a lot of fans unhappy Saturday night after he walked off the stage at his Sacramento, California, concert after only about 30 minutes — half of which were spent doing what Kanye does best: ranting. The rapper managed to catch the full wrath of the Beyhive because of his shady remarks about Beyoncé and Jay Z.

If you think Kanye might be having some sort of meltdown, you could be right. A rep for the outspoken 40-year-old told Rolling Stone that the remaining 21 dates of his Saint Pablo Tour have been canceled, including his New Year's Eve finale at Brooklyn's Barclays Center. All tickets will be refunded.

West himself has yet to comment. Is Kanye just exhausted, as E! News reports? Or is this a Beyhive conspiracy?

At just 26 years old, Jennifer Lawrence is not like most millennials. She has no student loan debt, for one thing, which might have something to do with the fact that she made $46 million last year, earning her the mantle of highest-paid actress in Hollywood for the second year in a row.

The other thing that separates Lawrence from her 20-something peers is that she "works very hard" on living as privately as possible: no Instagram, no Twitter, no Snapchat. She also had a soft warning for admirers who overstep. "You might think you know me, but when you approach me you're a total stranger to me and I'm scared. I get very protective of my space," the "Passenger" star tells Vanity Fair. "If I'm eating dinner and somebody comes up and a flash goes off from someone's iPhone camera, I am really rude to that person."

Yikes. Hope she doesn't carry a longbow.

Fans brings Lady Gaga to tears

After an amazing performance of her single "Million Reasons" at Sunday's American Music Awards, Lady Gaga found herself crying in the garage of the Microsoft Theater. She wasn't bummed about not taking home an award, or a wardrobe malfunction. The pop star was a weepy audience member for a group of fans serenading her with their own rendition of "Million Reasons."

When they finished the song, the 30-year-old blew kisses, shook hands and hugged some of the fans. Gaga recently opened up about the need to take time off before making her fifth solo studio album, "Joanne," in order to get back to what's important. We have to admit, this touching moment is probably somewhere on that list.

Someone grab the tissues.

What to do if your match stops messaging

Single and Sniping

EDWARDS

"I had a few messages with a woman, but then she stopped messaging," one of my clients mentioned this week. It's not uncommon for a match to ghost — before you've even met offline.

There are a few dozen reasons I've heard for this lapse in response, including: They haven't logged into the site or app for a while, canceled their subscription, got busy at work, started seeing someone seriously, or perhaps, just forgot to reply. It all happens. Don't take it personally — in very few instances will the

Dating site users should wait seven days to follow up, says the expert. iStock reason be you.

Instead, consider that in a world of overstimulation, you need to be proactive.

Here's what to do if your match hasn't responded:

Give the person space

Following up too soon can look overeager — and even needy — so give it some time (but not too much or you risk losing momentum). On a dating site, my clients find that waiting about seven days is ideal, while on an app, three days is sufficient.

See if he's read the message.

Some dating platforms allow you to see if the person has read your last message. If she hasn't read it, there is less chance she'll respond no matter what you write.

Craft a check-in.

Consider your follow up a check-in — you're writing to see how they are, and if he's still interested. Focus on something timely, like what happened over the weekend, or "Hope you had an awesome Thanksgiving! I spent time with my family in the 'burbs — our flag football game was the highlight. How about you?" Make sure you end with a question — similar to what you should ask in an initial message — so it's simple for your match to respond. And no matter what you do, don't call them out for not replying sooner. Insecurity isn't sexy on anyone.

Meet Auli'i Cravalho, star of 'Moana'

A teenager from Hawaii wound up teaming up with The Rock on the latest Disney film.

@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Auli'i Cravalho was just a teenager from Hawaii before she scored the lead role in "Moana." She performed at her school's Concert Glee Club, she studied for her AP and she liked to dance the hula. When word came that Disney was searching for teenage girls for their latest animated film — an ocean adventure set centuries in the past, about a girl who sets sail by herself to save her island from destruction — Cravalho wasn't even going to audition. But she did, and all of a sudden a Disney fanatic found herself becoming a bona fide Disney princess, sharing vocal space with no less than Dwayne Johnson.

How much has your life changed since making "Moana"?

It hasn't changed that much. Finding a balance between school and this incredible blessing is a little tough. [Laughs] I'm still doing homework, whether it's on a plane or in a hotel room. My friends have changed just a little bit. They've started calling me "Moana" instead of Auli'i. My teachers call me that, too. But they're so proud and supportive. Even though I'm across hundreds of miles of ocean, I still get Skyped and texts. That's all I could have ever hoped for. But I am missing my cat right now.

What kind of cat do you have?

Oh my god. [Laughs] I have a domestic short-hair tortoiseshell cat. She's a stray.

So you found her?

Sort of. My childhood friend found a stray cat, but she was moving. So I took her. She's become my lovable fat kitty who I feed too much. [Laughs] She falls over a lot and makes me laugh.

I don't want to assume you watched Disney films growing up.
Oh no, you can assume.

Which were your favorites?

"Mulan" was definitely my first Disney love. I thought she was so empowering. I thought she just broke a gender norm. I realized that at a young age. Perhaps I didn't voice it as "she broke a gender norm." [Laughs] But I knew she was really special. She understood what was needed of her and she went out and honored her family in such an immense and beautiful way.

Disney has always been good at that: Their animated films have long tended to be about strong women, including Moana.

Absolutely. Moana is such a beautiful heroine. She's gorgeous inside and out. She's strong, but that doesn't mean she isn't also deep and emotional as well. She's sentimental and kind and selfless for her people, the way she would journey out into the sea. She had no idea how to do what she did, but she did it. She went out to save them, and also to find herself. I think that's universal.

In Disney's "Moana," Auli'i Cravalho voices a young Polynesian girl who sets sail — eventually with a fun-loving demigod (voiced by Dwayne Johnson) — to save her island from ruin. DISNEY

Black Friday bargains and bar specials

Because shopping is some high-energy cardio.

@MetroBOS

Shop... and then drink. Is there a better way to navigate the traumas of Black Friday? Besides store bargains, bars and restaurants have deals, too.

Let's start with the shopping part of the day: Locally owned contemporary women's boutique Ku De Ta — home to feminine boho-chic threads from Aratta and trendy braided metal wrap necklaces by Sogoli — has 20-percent-off storewide and an additional 20-percent-off off all sale items at both The Street and South Boston locations (33 Boylston St., Chestnut Hill; 663 East Broadway, South Boston, kudetaboston.com).

When you spend $150 at another locally bred boutique, A Ruby in Copley Place or Legacy Place, you receive a free A Ruby charm bracelet in brass or silver ($45 value). Stock up on the exclusive simple, cozy and effortlessly stylish athleisure and everyday separates from Club Monaco and J.Jill alumna Avra Myers (724 Legacy Place, Dedham; Copley Place, 100 Huntington Ave., aruby.net).

Legacy Place continues to take the lead on Black Friday fun with a complimentary outdoor yoga class by Stil Studio and lululemon from (10 a.m.-11 a.m.), live music, balloon art, food tastings and live holiday carolers. Store bargains include entire purchase discounts of 50-percent-off at Gap, 40-percent-off at Levi's, 50-percent-off off all apparel at Urban Outfitters and complimentary gift cards for the first 100 customers at Neiman Marcus Last Call (680 Legacy Place, Dedham, legacyplace.com). However, at Cambridge-Side Galleria, head across the street for Restaurant Dante's post-shopping Retail Therapy Sip & Sfizi, which includes eight bar-bite choices (such as melanzane, arancini, mozzarella en carozza, polpetta, robiola burger or calamari) paired with a glass of red or white wine for a mere $15 (5:30 p.m.-11 p.m. 40 Edwin H. Land Blvd., Cambridge, restaurantdante.com).

Then by the Prudential Center and Copley Place, enjoy Porto's specially curated Black Friday pick-me-up, the Black Friday French 75 (Monkey 47 gin and Gosset champagne), or special Black Friday brunch (Ring Road, Boston, porto-boston.com).

Big Night Entertainment Group — the folks behind the likes of Red Lantern, Empire and Gem — will offer a two-for-one deal of their own for Black Friday: Buy a gift card at any of its establishments and receive a complimentary one of equal value ($500 maximum purchase per person; bneg.com).

Meanwhile, Copper-smith in South Boston is offering 50-percent-off all food from 5 p.m. until close — because if buffalo shrimp and tater tot nachos aren't the best way to end a day of bargain hunting, we don't know what is (40 W. Third St., South Boston, CoppersmithBoston.com).

The best foods for pregnant women

You can still eat soft cheese—if it's pasteurized.

Willow Jarosh and Stephanie Clarke, the duo behind C&J Nutrition, a NYC and Washington, D.C., wellness company, noticed a common concern among their pregnant clients: Many were overwhelmed trying to keep track of all the foods they'd been told were taboo.

That inspired the duo to write the "Healthy Happy Pregnancy Cookbook," a guide to "all the amazing things that [pregnant women] can and should eat," including more than 125 easy-to-make, nutritious recipes.

"During pregnancy, you can actually treat some of the discomforts you're having via your food choices each day," Jarosh says, adding that the concept of "food as medicine" is integral to their wellness practice.

The two certified nutritionists and registered dietitians suggest the best foods to combat the most common pregnancy discomforts, advise how to manage cravings — and share a nausea- and cramp-fighting orange-carrot smoothie recipe.

Your cookbook includes recipes to treat common ailments during pregnancy. Let's start with morning sickness.

With nausea, getting a little bit of protein with each meal really helps combat that. Many protein-rich foods, particularly meat and foods that smell strongly, are really off-putting to women who are experiencing nausea. Smoothies, which are cold and refreshing, are a great way to incorporate protein sources like yogurt and tofu in a way that doesn't feel protein-y. We wanted to make the recipes easy for someone else to make because you don't necessarily want to be in the kitchen when you feel that way. Quinoa is a good high-quality source of protein with a more carby feeling. We add chicken-bone broth to

Common misconceptions

Many pregnant women believe that all soft cheeses, like feta and brie, are off the table. "But the only reason not to eat a soft cheese when you're pregnant is if it's unpasteurized," says Clarke. "Deli meats, you shouldn't eat cold but you can if they're heated."

When it comes to coffee, you're fine to keep it to two cups a day. If you do decide to cut it out, for whatever reason, Clarke and Jarosh caution against going cold turkey to avoid caffeine withdrawal.

"We hear a lot from our clients that they're really bummed they can't eat fish anymore," the authors say. "The opposite is actually true: It's really important to get the DHA and omega-3 fatty acids during pregnancy that salmon and tuna and the really fatty fish provide." There are only four fish that pregnant women should avoid: shark, swordfish, tilefish and king mackerel, which are known for high levels of methyl mercury.

How to break into the world of fashion design

Learn how to stand out in this crowded and competitive field.

LAKSHMI GANDHI
@LakshmiGandhi
lakshmi.gandhi@metro.us

Aspiring fashionistas looking to break into the world of design need more than a good eye and a fantastic sense of style.

"Everyone who picks out a button thinks they are a designer these days," says George Simonton, a longtime fashion designer and a professor at the Fashion Institute of Technology. "You see all of these so-called designers who are celebrities, but they I tell my students they are pretend designers, they are hiring people to do the work."

Simonton says that while much has changed since he began his career in fashion 50 years ago on Manhattan's famed Seventh

To become a fashion designer you need to learn the fundamentals of the craft says Simonton. ISTOCK

Avenue, the fundamentals remain.

"You still have to learn the craft," he stresses.

"Yves St. Laurent is my idol and years ago came to visit FIT. The students asked him what the secret to his success was. He said, 'I learned my craft.'"

We asked Simonton to share his advice for students dreaming of rocking the runway one day.

Master the basics

Simonton always tells students that while technology has obviously made some aspects of fashion design easier, a strong foundation is still key. "Courses like sketching, pattern making and draping are all important," he says. "You might not have to do it when you start working, but you better know how to do it yourself."

Develop a thick skin

Like many other creative types, fashion designers can be notoriously protective of their ideas. But Simonton says the best designers are able to take a step back. "My students often say, 'You really made me have a trained eye,'" he says. "You have to be able to look at your garment critically." The ability to take criticism and adapt is a key skill in the world of fashion.

Be your best salesperson

In addition to his work as a designer, Simonton made a name for himself as a longtime host on QVC. "During my 12 years on air, people would stop me and say 'I love the way you talk about your garments,'" Simonton recalls. "You have to be a business person and a designer at the same time." The best salespeople always let their passion for their ideas and collections shine through.

Become a people person

The days of fashion designers being part of the background are long gone, but Simonton says many of the students he meets are too reserved for the industry. "I see students who come into my classroom and they don't say good morning, they are constantly looking at their computers. But they've got to learn how to present themselves," says Simonton. "Because you're going to be presenting your ideas to your boss, to your sales people and to the press. So you better start learning how to do so."

The Bruins finally have an identity again

The B's defense is back up to snuff.

RICH SLATE
@RichSlate
sports@metro.us

For the past few fruitless seasons, one of the more common but also valid complaints about the Bruins was that they were a hockey team without an identity. They couldn't figure out who they wanted to be: shuffling through a flawed mix of young players and veterans while also being slow to adapt to the changing league around them that was suddenly based more on speed and skill rather than size and physicality. Through 18 games of the 2016-17 campaign though, Boston (11-7-0) looks to have gradually found its place in today's NHL.

Led by goaltender Tuukka Rask (11-2-0, 1.46 goals against average, .946 save percentage, three shutouts), who was named the first star of the week in the NHL last week, the B's are at least temporarily back to being one of the stingiest defensive teams in the league. The Bruins are 7-3-0 in their last 10 games and are tied with Tampa Bay (12-6-1) for the best road record in the NHL (7-4-0) during that stretch. A lot of this is due to their ability to keep the puck out of their own net.

Head coach Claude Julien is Boston's all-time wins leader for a reason, as his teams are often known for their defensive prowess.

"Defensively, they are taking a lot of pride in defending well," he noted after Saturday's unexpectedly easy 4-1 victory over Winnipeg (9-10-2) at TD Garden.

Those particular two points against the Jets were quite notable since the Bruins held them to only 12 shots on goal for the entire contest. To put that into perspective: that was the fewest shots on goal they had allowed since Nov. 24, 2001 and the fewest allowed on home ice since Minnesota recorded 10 on Jan. 12, 1981. Obviously in an 82-game marathon of a regular season, outliers like that will pop up from time to time but those statistics prove how historically relevant that effort by Rask & Co. turned out to be.

Going into Tuesday's meeting with St. Louis (10-6-3), Boston is currently tied with Washington for the fourth fewest goals allowed (40) in the NHL. Besides Rask's superb start, what makes this all the more remarkable for the Bruins is that their defensive corps was thought to be their biggest weakness heading into the season. Rookie Brandon Carlo (who leads all rookies in plus/minus with plus-11) looks very promising while his partner and captain Zdeno Chara (plus-12, tied for sixth best in NHL) has seemingly been energized playing with someone that is less than half his age. As left wing Brad Marchand said, "we have a bigger job to do than scoring goals. With new faces and a different system, this is not easy to do but guys are dedicated and disciplined."
